South Carolina Public Service Commission

Dear Public Service Commission,

Duke could have begun investing in and building up renewable energy a long time ago, but for whatever reason, it did not. This is unacceptable given the current state of our environment as regards pollution, which is present in many of our municipal water supplies and in the air. To Duke and other corporations, this is a question of the bottom line rather than what is the right thing to do to assure that future generations will have an unpolluted environment to live in. If this doesn't change, the future will be unpleasant for nearly everyone to say the least. If we can't overcome the power of money (which is in its basic form an idea in people's minds) we will continue to see our living world being killed and destroyed as big money seeks to be bigger money.

Duke could change the way they do business if anyone among their board had the courage and intelligence to lay out a viable plan to do so.

Duke should quit investing in dirty, old energy like coal and nuclear, and actually invest in the cheaper renewable technologies its executives claim to support. I want the Carolinas to be more energy efficient and powered by local wind & solar that will employ thousands of Carolinians.

Sincerely,

David Shelton

South Carolina Public Service Commission

Dear Public Service Commission,

Duke was recently granted a 7% rate hike which hurts seniors and others on a fixed income and now they want to more than double that amount with another rate increase? NO! A thousand times no! It's time for Duke Energy to dig into its own pockets for upgrades instead of raising rates on consumers again. Duke should use its profits to invest in clean energy technologies rather than investing more in dirty, dangerous energy like coal and nuclear. Cheaper renewable technologies are the path forward for the Carolinas to be more energy efficient and to create thousands of well-paying jobs for Carolinians. No more rate increases on consumers!

Sincerely,

Trudy Crow
